Class Prophecy of 1942

"All aboard! All aboard!" cried the conductor as I boarded the train in New York City for Cleveland. Stepping up to the conductor, I asked how long I must wait for my train and discovered, much to my surprise, Alvin Bockhorst, who had graduated with me five years ago in Taylor High School. I told him I was starting toward Cincinnati.

Upon arriving in Cleveland, I went to The Hollenden where I met Marion Baker, the manager, still jolly and good-natured. Going over to the desk to inquire about a room, I saw Ruth Kraus typing. We chatted a bit and decided to have lunch together. After eating a very sumptuous repast, I was curious to learn who the chef was—none other than our own Robert
