

The background of the entire page is an abstract geometric pattern. It consists of various circles and arcs in three colors: black, white, and gray. Some circles are solid, while others are hollow. The sizes of the circles vary significantly, from small dots to large, dominant shapes. The arrangement is scattered across the page, with some elements overlapping. The text is centered in the middle of the page, between two clusters of these geometric shapes.

"They don't have intelligence they have thintelligence. They see the immediate situation they think narrowly and call it being focused. They don't see the surround, the consequences. Human belief is that we can control nature. In fact it is quite the opposite. You can make a boat but not the ocean. Your powers are much less than your dreams of reason would have you believe."
